

Solid Ground housed 118 adults and 224 children (342 persons) in 88 families in 2017 in our site-based and scattered-site housing programs for families experiencing homelessness.

Additionally, Solid Ground served another 28 families (81 persons) in housing search during the year. Of these, we were unable to secure housing for 22 households and 6 households were still in housing search at the end of the year. see footnote*

Eighty-five percent (85%) of persons served during the year came to Solid Ground from Ramsey and Washington Counties. Seventy-five percent (75%) of adults and children served were persons of color, primarily African American. Fifty-seven percent (57%) of the parents served were age 30 or under. Forty-five percent (45%) of children in Solid Ground housing in 2017 were age 5 or younger.

* In recent years, the Twin Cities rental vacancy rate has hovered around 2%, with the vacancy rate for affordable units even lower. The families served by Solid Ground have barriers such as low incomes, poor credit and criminal histories, and are increasingly spending a longer time in housing search. During this time, it is common for clients to disengage with Solid Ground and exit from services without housing. The number of families that are ultimately unable to attain housing after six months of housing search assistance with Solid Ground is also increasing.
